INCLUDING A
TIN PEDDLER.

By ARNOLD MORTON.

Copyrighted, 1907, by E. C. Parcells.

Yes, Arthur Blakely was to blame for the quarrel. The rising young lawyer frankly admitted this to his law books and his office desk, and he would have frankly admitted it to Molly Gray but for pride's sake. His transgressions consisted of seeing another young lady off on the train. The "seeing off" meant buying her ticket and getting her trunk checked, and that might have been forgiven had not something else followed. She had to change cars at a junction five miles out, and she was in such fear that she would take a wrong train and bring up in Texas instead of Connecticut that the young lawyer was prevailed upon to accompany her thus far. Of course Molly happened by the merest accident to find it out, and the fact that Blakely had said nothing made a mountain out of a molehill. It was that little trifle that brought about a quarrel and disturbed the center of equilibrium of the whole United States.

Miss Molly was fortunate enough to have two aunts. She was Aunt Rebecca's ward and resided with her in the city, and her Aunt Sarah lived about thirty miles out and had advice to offer on all occasions, but more especially in cases of lovers' quarrels. When this quarrel had lasted a week, and when the young man, after seven sleepless nights, had determined to sink his pride and send flowers and follow them in person, Miss Molly was tossing her head before the glass and saying things to herself, particularly that she would show Mr. Arthur Blakely what was what and teach him a lesson to last him all the rest of his born days. She'd teach him to buy tickets and check trunks and ride out to junctions with a girl who had once referred to her hair as plain red instead of Titian.

Ten minutes later she had decided to visit her Aunt Sarah. A message was sent ahead, and Aunt Sarah was at the depot to meet her. The niece received a warm welcome, and, following a plan perfected on the train, she forced herself to be unusually gay and appeared in the best of spirits. They had scarcely reached the house, however, when Aunt Sarah patted her on the shoulder in a motherly way and said:

"Now, then, you poor child, let's hear all about it. I want to assure you at the start that you have my entire sympathy."

"Why, aunt, what do you mean?"

"Don't try to fool me, young lady! I'm not your Aunt Rebecca, but your Aunt Sarah. Has that scoundrel toyed with your heartstrings and then walked off? When Sister Rebecca wrote me that he had a Roman nose and a sandy mustache, I set him down for a scoundrel!"

The young lady tried to brazen it out, but was cornered and had to tell. She made it as light for Arthur as she could, but when she had finished her story Aunt Sarah said:

"You have done just the right thing. That young man needs a lesson. You are going to stay right here for the rest of the summer, and he may write, telephone and telegraph until he is gray headed, and it won't do him any good. The Grays have never allowed any one to walk over them, and they are not going to begin now. If you don't make him get down on his knees and ask your pardon a thousand times over, you are no true Gray."

Molly went to her room greatly dissatisfied. She had had a quarrel with Arthur Blakely, but there were lots of things to be said in his favor, and it was real mean of Aunt Sarah to pitch into him as she had. The young lady presently found herself arguing that she had a perfect right to feel hurt and injured and be a week getting over it. She had brought along his notes and letters, of course. They made quite a large bundle. She selected three or four and read them over, and then she had a good cry.

Aunt Sarah had said that the conversation would be resumed next day. Molly woke up with a determination that nothing further should be said. After breakfast she took her book and hid herself to the hickory grove down in the meadow, and there she remained till the horn blew for dinner. She read a little, she cried a little and she thought a great deal. If she had had the hefty bundle of Arthur's letters with her she might have cried more, but she had carelessly left it behind her and did not wish to go back for fear of Aunt Sarah. As she reached the house she ran upstairs to look over just one letter, and a minute later a scream resounded through halls and rooms.

"What on earth is it?" demanded the aunt from the foot of the stairs.

"My letters are gone!"

"What letters?"

"Arthur's letters to me. I left them on the floor beside my trunk."

"Then you'll never see them again. A tin peddler came along about 10 o'clock, and I wanted to scare up enough paper rags to buy a dipper. I picked up that I could find, and as I thought the bundle was something you had thrown away I checked it in."

There were other screams, followed by exclamations, tears and a close approach to hysteria, and the result was that a quarter of an hour later aunt and niece drove over the dusty highway as fast as the old horse could gallop. They were looking far ahead in hopes of catching sight of the tin peddler.

Those letters must be recovered at all hazards. Failure apparently meant one case of suicide and one of life-long remorse.

Meanwhile, things had been happening elsewhere. Arthur Blakely had finally decided to send that bouquet and to follow it in person several hours later, only to find that Molly had departed for the country. It wasn't a case where he could go into court and argue it out, but a case of hustle. About the time that Aunt Sarah was picking up paper rags to make her deal with the peddler the young lawyer was leaving the city on the express and preparing his argument for the jury of one. There was, of course, no one at the depot to meet him, and he stepped out in a lively way for the half mile walk. As he did so a tin peddler came driving along, and one of the wheels of his wagon struck a stone and slewed the vehicle around and upset it in the ditch. The bags of paper rags on top were thrown to the ground, and one of them burst open shot a bundle of letters to the feet of the lover. He recognized his stationery and his handwriting at a glance. Sherlock Holmes could not have invented a more dramatic situation.

"Villain, where did you get these?" Arthur finally demanded of the peddler.

"Villain yourself! What in thunder are you?"

"You have robbed a house! You have stolen these letters from a girl!"

"Come off, you are crazy!"

"I arrest you! You are my prisoner! Here is evidence to convict you!"

There is a difference between the legal business and the constabulary business, and young Blakely soon discovered this. He had only taken the man of thievery by the collar when he was seized himself in return, and as Aunt Sarah and Molly drove up the men were rolling over and over on the ground.

There were ejaculations, exclamations, explanations and introductions. Mr. Blakely hunted for his hat and missing buttons and begged pardon. Molly regarded him with what she intended to be a cold stare, but which had a "forgive-me" look mingled with it. The peddler swore and picturesquely said somebody had to pay for his skinned nose. Aunt Sarah, bless her heart, was equal to the emergency. She felt the sting of conscience for having laid her sacrilegious hands on those love letters. She suggested that a five dollar bill was the right sort of plaster for a skinned nose, and Mr. Blakely handed it over. Under other circumstances, being in the law, he would not have given it up until judgment had been rendered by a court and a writ of execution issued. When peace reigned Aunt Sarah climbed down from the buggy and said:

"I must go and see Mrs. Williams in that cottage over there. Mr. Blakely, will you have the kindness to drive Miss Gray back to the house?"

It was only a mile back to the farmhouse, but owing to the lame horse and various other matters it was three hours before the buggy drove up to the gate. Many a lovers' quarrel has been settled in far less time.

Some weeks later when Aunt Sarah was asked about the rumored engagement she assumed a knowing and important look and replied:

"Yes, I expect it's so, but where would they have been but for me and the tin peddler and Providence? I shall never let one of these men pass my gate again without at least calling to him and asking the price of wash dishes and nutmeg graters."

Judges of the Olympic Games.

The helladocae, or judges of the Olympic, were ten in number, selected by lot from the ten tribes of Elis. They entered upon their office ten months before the festival. They were first schooled in the traditions and regulations of the games, then studied the capacities of the athletes while they were still in training. They had to decide upon the qualifications of the contestants, make up the programme of the game, supervise the preparation of the scene of contest, act as judges in the games and distribute the prizes. It was a position of honor and distinction. They came to the contest clad in purple robes, and sat in a tribune opposite the finish of the races in the stadium or hippodrome. They seem to have subdivided the function of judging, but at least three were present to judge in every contest. Their decisions were usually final, but an appeal might be carried to the Olympic senate. They were assisted in the execution of their commands by a large and well organized body of police.

Ocean Heart.

The throbbing and vibration of the engines of a modern steamer have a most extraordinary effect upon the human heart. Let it be said at once that ocean traveling does not in any way injure the heart; on the contrary, it benefits it, with the general health. But the vibration of the machinery is transmitted to this vital organ with the most extraordinary results so far as medical examination is concerned. A ship's doctor will tell you that when he listens through his stethoscope to the beating of a man's heart at sea it seems as if every moment the heart would stop. With sturdy and invalid passengers it is just the same. The heart appears to the doctor as if every beat would be its last. This being the case, it is exceedingly difficult for the physician to ascertain the true condition of the traveler's health, and he generally resorts to the expedient of slinging his patient in a hammock, where the vibration is considerably lessened, though no device can ever come it altogether.—London Arrows.

CUPID'S COURT.

An Adverse Decision, an Appeal and an Oral Argument.

The judge's daughter was perturbed. "Papa," she said, knitting her pretty brow, "I am in doubt as to whether I have kept to the proper form of procedure. In law one can err in so many little technicalities that I am ever fearful. Now, last evening George—"

The judge looked at her so sharply over his glasses that she involuntarily paled.

"I thought you had sent him about his business," he said.

"I did hand down an adverse decision," she answered, "and he declared that he would appeal. However, I convinced him that I was the court of last resort in a case like that and that no appeal would lie from my decision."

"Possibly the court was assuming a little more power than rightfully belongs to it," said the judge thoughtfully, "but let that pass. What did he do then?"

"He filed a petition for a rehearing," "The usual course," said the judge, "but it is usually nothing but a mere formality."

"So I thought," returned the girl, "and I was prepared to deny it without argument, but the facts set forth in his petition were sufficient to make me hesitate and wonder whether his case had really been properly presented at the first trial."

"Upon what grounds did he make the application?" asked the judge, scowling.

"Well," she replied, blushing a little, "you see, he proposed by letter, and his contention was that the case was of that peculiar character that cannot be properly presented by briefs, but demands oral arguments. The fact that the latter had been omitted, he held, should be held an error, and the point was such a novel one that I consented to let him argue it. Then his argument was so forceful that I granted his petition and consented to hear the whole case again. Do you think?"

"I think," said the judge, "that the court favors the plaintiff."—Chicago Post.

MONEY SYSTEMS.

The World's Coinage Muddle and the Range of Units of Value.

Twenty-six different monetary units are used by the forty-eight principal countries of the world. Thus Great Britain uses the sovereign or pound sterling, France and six other countries of Europe use a unit equal to the franc, and Canada and the United States use the dollar.

In value these different units range from 4.4 to 194.3 cents of money of the United States. They are represented by coins of various values, which are either multiples or fractional parts of a value of their own chief units, and there are no doubt at least 200 such sufficient coins not one of which seems to have a value equal to that of any commonly known unit of weight, as the gram, for example, or the ounce of gold, although forty-three of these forty-eight countries have accepted gold as their standard measure of value.

This lack of logical relation of coins to any widely used unit of weight of the precious metals may be due to the fact that money systems seem to have grown up haphazard, under diverse conditions of life, in different parts of the world.

Such diversity in money may have been of little moment when millions of people spent their lives knowing nothing of the existence of other millions and there was little traffic. But these differences in monetary units are of importance now that international commerce includes millions of tons of products of the toll of all lands and billions of dollars each year to settle its bills, for such differences put upon trade a wholly unnecessary tax. No account is made here of the burden laid on domestic trade by like variation in the value of such units at home, as of the tael of China, which has sixteen different values within that empire.—Moody's Magazine.

"Old Hundred" Scares Birds.

It is a strange but well authenticated fact that the wild creatures of the woods dislike the sound of that solemn hymn "Old Hundred." Muir, the naturalist, proved the truth of this by singing it in the woods of the Sierras to the birds and squirrels, which were very tame from never having been frightened by the report of a gun or other alarming sound. They would come and sit near him upon the branches of trees and listen to any lively tune he might sing, blinking their bright eyes as though they liked it, but at the first sound of "Old Hundred" they would beat a quick retreat to their holes or nests and never appear again until he changed the tune. This experiment was made in different places on various occasions with exactly the same result.—New York Herald.

When It Rains in India.

While Jupiter Pluvius reigns in India nothing can be done out of doors. The rain at times is simply a white liquid sheet dropping straight down from the heavens, so that no very great stretch of imagination is required to convince one that a deluge is not an impossible event.—Wide World Magazine.

In Prospect.

"Have you lived here all your life, friend?"

"Not yet, but if I don't get money enough to move I reckon I'll have to!"—Atlanta Constitution.

It is not unreasonable that are wanted now, for there are books stuff full of stoical reasonings.—Epictetus.

OLD CARLSBAD.

In Ancient Times the Cure Was Somewhat Violent.

Carlsbad, that fashionable resort in Bohemia, is a very ancient cure place. It has held a royal charter from Kaiser Carl IV. since 1401. History has it that it was the mighty leap from rocky heights to the depths below of a hunted deer pursued by the hounds of Kaiser Carl IV. that led to the discovery of the Sprudel spring and that the deer hunting emperor was the founder of the health resort to which he gave his name.

Originally the Carlsbad cure and the mode of life there, a mode which remained in fashion for at least two centuries, consisted solely in the use of the baths. This, however, was so energetic that we children of the twentieth century are overcome by a feeling of admiration for the doctors who ordered such cures and still greater honor for the patients who could undergo them, for the bath treatment was so severe that it was not inaptly called the "bathfresser" or skin eater. It was only about the year 1500 that Dr. Payer, the town physician of Elbogen, near by, ordered the Carlsbad water to be drunk as a cure. Quoting from the publications of the period and Dr. Payer's remarks:

"I have said that this water must be drunk, and as hitherto it was not usually employed for drinking, but only for bathing, this will appear new to many." The quantity of the water prescribed was in handsome proportion to the "skin eater"—twenty, forty and up to sixty cups of a morning regularly.—Town and Country.

A Cardboard Planet.

One remarkable achievement of Sir William Herschel was in connection with the planet Saturn. He had arranged to erect his telescope at Windsor castle to enable Queen Charlotte and the ladies of the court to see the wonders of the ringed planet, but on the evening arranged for the observation great banks of clouds covered the sky. However, he explained that that would not matter, and after the instrument had been carefully directed the queen and her attendants looked through it and saw the great planet and its marvelous rings quite distinctly. Herschel, it seems, had expected bad weather and during the day had made a cardboard model of the Saturnian system and erected it in the grounds, a lamp at the back providing the necessary illumination.—Westminster Gazette.

He Wasn't a Gormand.

That wary old fellow, Baille Macduff, was enticed into a friend's house the other night, and his host managed to win 50 shillings from him at "nap." What is more remarkable, when the baillie had parted with his last shilling he rose, full of wrath.

"Won't you stay to supper?" pressed his host. "We have a fine bit of ham waiting."

"No, not I. Dae ye think I eat 50 shillings' worth of ham?"—London Answers.

Continuous Cooking.

"New York is a place of continuous cooking," said the woman from the west. "Walk along any street at any time and you will get a whiff of coffee and broiling meat. There doesn't seem to be any set time for meals. Judging by the smell, breakfast is a movable feast that takes place any time between 6 o'clock and noon."—New York Post.

Long Feet Want.

Jaggies—Do you think there will ever be any radical change in the style of men's hats? Wagglies—Not unless somebody invents a hat that will cover the bald spot on the back of the head.—Harper's Weekly.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or poison is offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to insist upon such knowledge. So he publishes a treatise on each bottle wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies in plain English. This he feels he can well afford to do because the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements, giving rise to frequent headaches, backache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, oftentimes, with a debilitating, pelvic catarrhal drain and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nerve and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several systems of medicine, recommending each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

The Responsibilities Of Citizenship.

We hear much of undesirable citizenship and see much of it, but while we know of the negative there is much yet to be said concerning its antithesis—real desirable citizenship. Many of us are deceived by the illusion that we are good citizens because we break no laws and keep faith with our fellow men. There are innumerable fallacies along this line. The erroneous judgments are due to the misconception of the degrees of responsibilities but in varying degrees.

Self-respect is self-responsibility and the individual who improves himself and makes the best of his opportunities, carving out his way up the steep ascent of success, holds the key to desirable citizenship.

Family responsibility is a most sacred duty, but when ignored or weighed too lightly debars many a man from real desirable citizenship. The man who is economically unprepared to deal in the matrimonial market jeopardizes his citizenship most surely when he takes on the responsibility of a family which he cannot support properly. From such homes come street arabs and victims of the child labor employers and ultimately citizens who, because of the oppression forced upon them by an irresponsible parent, lead too attentive an ear to the red-flagged anarchist or the disgruntled socialist. Such are unable to take advantage of our public utilities of which we are so proud and for which we spend so much public money. How to bring such people up to the level of being able to grasp and enjoy these opportunities is a vital problem. Solving of it lies in the enforcement of the realization of responsibility.

The man, however, who is a good individual and fully cognizant of the weighty responsibility of family cares may still fall short of his responsibility to the state. He fails to realize that the state is composed of individuals and is not an abstract term. He does not realize the might within his ballot and that his neglect in casting it costs cities just such trouble as San Francisco has been through. It has been aptly said that "the near citizen is the fellow who is entitled to but does not vote." The game of politics is a clean one if you do not leave it to the dirty fellows to play.

Many so-called good citizens are responsible for the Schmitz, Boxtons, Lornegans and Gallaghers of to-day.

CALIFORNIA TOWNS and cities are vying with one another for fame in these times of large tourist invasion. They take different means of advertising and all are effective. Lodi has been heard from. She has had a local reputation for watermelons but her grape carnival has notified the outside world that other things grow as luxuriantly and that her citizens are alive enough to want more settlers and know how to get them. Several thousand dollars were spent on the carnival but the boom was worth the price. Those who did not even go to the festa know that the right kind of people live in Lodi. Sonoma Valley could put up twice the show and has more natural advantages but its people are averse to bestir themselves. When and wherever they have they made a big success and gave other sections a hard race.

DANIEL A. RYAN, the talented young lawyer, has been nominated by the Republicans of San Francisco for Mayor and District Attorney Langdon has been given a place on the ticket with him by the unanimous vote of the delegates in the convention. This ticket ought to be acceptable to the misgoverned and graft-ridden people of the metropolis and we believe it is. The Bulletin and Examiner, however, which have been pursuing a very erratic course on all public questions of late, are disgruntled because Taylor did not get the nomination, and bid fair to inaugurate a rule or ruin policy that would re-elect Schmitz for a fourth term were it not that the despicable wretch is a convicted felon and debarred from ever holding public office again. Daniel A. Ryan is an honorable man can be relied upon to fill the office of chief magistrate of San Francisco with honor, dignity and grace. The same may be said of the present Mayor, Mr. Taylor, but our big metropolitan contemporaries, must remember that there are others.

AUTO racing is not sport but a simple recklessness which should be debarred. It requires no skill or prowess, just dare-devilry and an unfair test of mechanical devices. It is the extreme of extremes to deliberately take the chances which auto racing compels and sport with suicidal intent is none too strong a verdict for the onlooker to apply to every such deadly event.

ATTORNEY T. T. BUTTS, the Santa Rosa lawyer, has got another batch of divorce cases on hand this week in the Superior Court of this county. It is a cold day when Tom has not less than a dozen of these cases pending in our courts. He is an adept at severing the nuptial knot for mismatched, hair-pulling couples, and keeps the preachers busy all the time tying matrimonial knots that he may untie them.

A CONGRESS of seismologists is the latest, and it is to be hoped it will petition the universe to abate the earthquake nuisance.

It cost a foreigner of Redding $50 for killing a woodpecker. He probably concluded the charge was due to the long bill.

THE country is full of colored barbers who would be delighted to shave Ben Tillman.—Pasadena News.

THE man who swallowed a thermometer must have thought he was taking some degree.

THE walnut growers want higher prices for their crops. This looks like a shell game.

A BALLOON SCHOOL is the newest. Certainly higher education.

Met Violent Death.

Mrs. M. McLaughlin of San Francisco, stepmother of Dr. Alf. McLaughlin formerly of this place, met a tragic death in the metropolis on Friday of last week. She was a passenger on an electric car which was run down by a Santa Fe train at the Twenty-fifth street crossing and was instantly killed. A number of other passengers were injured and maimed.

Lame Back

This is an ailment for which Chamberlain's Pain Balm has proven especially valuable. In almost every instance it affords prompt and permanent relief. Mr. Luke LaGrange, of Orange, Mich., says of it: "After using a plaster and other remedies for three weeks for a bad, lame back, I purchased a bottle Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and two applications effected a cure."

Attack of Diarrhoea Cured by One Dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

I was so weak from an attack of diarrhoea that I could scarcely attend to my duties when I took a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It cured me entirely and I had been taking other medicine for nine days without relief. I heartily recommend this remedy for bowel complaints.—R. G. Stewart, of the firm of Stewart & Bro., Greenville, Ala.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, no treatment must be combined. One is local, one is constitutional, but both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the local. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is a topical mucous membrane suppository remedy, while Dr. Shoop's Restorative is wholly an internal treatment. The Restorative reaches throughout the entire system, seeking the repair of all nerve, all tissue, and all blood ailments.

The "Night Cure", as its name implies, does its work while you sleep. It soothes sore and inflamed mucous surfaces, heals local weaknesses and discharges, while the Restorative, ceases nervous excitement, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissues, bringing about renewed strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and give it tonic to the system. For positive local help, use as well.

The Grapes Came High.

The price of grapes this season is what is puzzling the brains of our vineyardists, and just what the "highest market price" will be is what keeps them guessing. Any inside information on that subject is listened to with avidity and that is why the INDEX-Tribune is always anxious to catch on to any old kind of a deal in wine grapes. The latest transaction took place last Sunday when C. Hauser, a fancier of other people's wine grapes, ran the price up to an average of $20,000 a ton. It happened this way. Not having a vine and fig tree of his own he invaded the big vineyard of the P. I. Company at El Verano and using his teeth and jaws as a crusher and his inside as a vat was making wine in that primitive way the best he knew how, when pounced upon by F. A. Riser, the manager. The latter resented the intrusion, as his vineyards have been repeatedly raided this season, and Hauser's arrest followed. The offender was later on haled before Judge Small by officer Joe Ryan and pleading guilty to a charge of misdemeanor was fined $10. The fine was paid, and as Hauser figures that he eat about a pound of grapes they averaged him in the neighborhood of $20,000 a ton. He wants no more at that price, however, and the market price for grapes is again normal.

EPIDEMIC SCARE IS NOW OVER.

Local Board of Health Remove Restrictions—Schools Re-Open Monday

At a meeting of the local Board of Health held yesterday it was decided to remove all restrictions on public gatherings and re-open the public schools next Monday, as all danger of an epidemic is now passed. Only one slight case of varioloid has developed in the valley the past two weeks and the three cases previously reported are convalescent.

The prompt action taken by our health board a few weeks ago was most timely and has effectually stamped out an epidemic which at one time threatened the entire valley.

O. W. Brown Has Arrived at Salina Cruz, Mexico.

Mrs. Fischer had long been a sufferer from cancer of the throat. Some months ago she went to San Francisco to be treated by a specialist, but without avail, and returned to die in her old home in the beautiful Sonoma Valley.

The deceased had long resided here and was highly esteemed by those who knew her for her many excellent womanly qualities. She leaves a large family of grown children, the daughters being Mrs. Albert Kerner of this place, Mrs. Mary Fischer of Los Angeles, Mrs. H. Shenkberg, Mrs. R. Spiegel and Mrs. Ernestine Fischer of San Francisco.

Wm. and Carl Fischer, the sons, are absent in the east.

The Estate of the Late E. P. Colgan.

That the late E. P. Colgan was an honest public official no better evidence is wanted than the value of his estate when he died. For twenty consecutive years he held office, being Sheriff and Tax Collector of this county four years and State Controller for sixteen years. The other day his widow, Mrs. Mary E. Colgan, filed her report as administratrix of the estate in the Superior Court of Sacramento county, and named the insignificant sum of $312.50 as constituting all of the estate of her deceased husband and asked that it be distributed. What a contrast between this honest public official and the boodling and thieving Schmitz and the corrupt and thrifty officials of his administration.

Sporting Notes.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A Cheerful Liar.

(Original.)

Judson Castor, gentleman of leisure, a member of many clubs, in order to escape the heat of the city went to the seashore. On the beach the morning after his arrival he noticed a lady whose appearance he admired greatly. She was about twenty-five years old and tastefully dressed and had a strong face and an independent mien. Castor sat on the beach where he could look at her as well as the bathers and between her and them divided his attention. When the lady tired of them she put up a huge parasol, took up a book and began to read. At noon she arose and went to her hotel.

This was repeated daily. The lady was never seen by Mr. Castor with any one else. He saw her go in and come out of her hotel, but never in company. She did not appear on the piazza or on the beach during the afternoon nor in the drawing room in the evening. Castor was obliged to be content to see her for a couple of hours in the morning. Not finding any one to give him an introduction, he set about contriving to scrape an acquaintance. One morning he went to the city, and when he returned in the afternoon he had with him a handsome stickpin, a large pearl in a bird's claw. The next morning he approached the lady, lifted his hat most deferentially and said:

"I beg your pardon. I found this pin in the sand yesterday at the place where you had been sitting. May I ask if it is yours?"

The lady looked at the pin, put her hand to her throat, appeared surprised and said:

"I had my pin with me yesterday and thought I had it now, but I see I haven't. I didn't know that I had lost it. Thank you very much."

Mr. Castor made a remark about the pleasure it gave him to restore her jewel, but since it did not appear from her manner that she desired the incident to form a basis for an acquaintance he bowed again and passed on. But he was astonished. He had found no pin, and he was not aware that she had lost one, and yet she had taken the one he had given her and did not even give him permission to chat with her. What did it mean? She was certainly a lady. But would every lady have the strength of character to refuse a jewel to be obtained so easily?

Mr. Castor was much put out. He had no objection to buying a woman's favor, but when bought he expected the goods to be delivered. He purposely passed the lady later in the morning while he was walking from the foam line up the incline of the beach. She did not notice him. He looked at her the next morning on the beach, but she gave him no recognition whatever. Castor when cool had good enough judgment, but when irritated it vanished. He made up his mind that the lady was waiting for more of the same kind.

The next day he went to the city again, and on the following morning the lady received through the mail a little box containing a solitaire diamond ring. With it was a bit of paper on which was written, "Also found on the beach."

The next morning Castor went to the shore solicited as to the result of his daring experiment. The lady was not there, but later he saw her coming, followed by a man whom Castor judged to be a porter. As soon as she reached the beach she pointed to Castor, and the man approached. Handing Castor the box he had sent the lady, he said:

"I am told to say that you have made a mistake."

Castor, coloring, took the box and shoved it in his pocket. The lady turned her back broadly upon him.

What did it all mean? Was she playing him for a big stake? Probably not, for she left the beach at once and the next morning did not appear. She had gone from the place. Castor went back to the city much discomfited.

The next winter, one evening, while Castor was in one of the orchestra chairs at a theater, on looking up at one of the boxes he saw the mysterious lady of the seashore. He did not catch her eye and, man of the world as he was, had not the assurance to look up again. During an intermission he felt a tap on his shoulder, and a gentleman he did not know asked him if he might see him for a moment without. Castor's heart sank. He expected to have to answer for an insult to a lady. The man did not stop, as expected, it mounted a flight of stairs, passed down the gallery and entered a box. Castor, following, stood before the lady of the beach.

"I have sent for you," she said, "to return what I supposed belonged to me, but was mistaken. I owned a stickpin like the one you handed me, though smaller. I never knew till after I had left the beach of my mistake. I have also the curiosity to know what induced you to send me the ring?"

And right here is where the genius of mendacity comes in. Castor, without flinching, asked, "What ring?" The lady, astonished, explained that she had received a ring which she had supposed came from him. He looked so pained that she offered a double apology, one for returning the stickpin and the other for returning him the ring. He was invited to remain with the party in the box till the close of the performance. He had secured his introduction.

She had been at the seashore with her invalid mother, which accounted for her being on the beach at times alone. AMY H. KENNEDY.

Sold by Simmons Pharmacy.

Westmoreland, Kans., May 5, 1902. Ballard Snow Liniment Co.: Your Snow Liniment cured an old sore on the side of my chin that was supposed to be a cancer. Co., Pa., has a sore and mistrusts that it is a cancer. Please send her a 50c bottle. Sold by Simmons Pharmacy.

A CLEAN WATCH

means good time to you for years to come. True economy in a time-piece lies in cleanliness. The delicate parts doing indelible work will soon wear themselves to ruin, destroy their high finish and perfect fit when running in accumulating dirt and sand oil.
